The LST 101 course might be of interest to you if you are curious about:

- the impacts of unions and the labor movement in the U.S.
- how the global economy affects your job and your future
- the existence of the 1% and the 99%
- how social class, gender and race may affect your life chances

Find out more about these & other important questions in:

LST 101: Introduction to Labor Studies

Fall Semester, 2015

Online

3 Credit Hours

Instructors: Valerie Carter and Marc Cryer

Satisfies the General Education Social Contexts and Institutions Requirement.

A required course in the Labor Studies minor.

To register, please discuss with your academic advisor or contact the University of Maine’s Continuing and Distance Education office at 581-3143.

Workers and union members are especially welcome and encouraged to take LST 101.
Also appropriate for both traditional and non-traditional students.

For more information: Contact Valerie Carter at UMaine’s Bureau of Labor Education, 581-4124, or by email: valerie.carter@umit.maine.edu