WHY STUDY ART HISTORY AT THE UNIVERSITY OF MAINE?

The Department of Art's BA program in Art History focuses on the critical study of artworks, material objects, and visual cultures. Our faculty encourages interdisciplinary inquiry into historically and culturally diverse forms of art and visual thinking. By emphasizing comprehensive research and critical writing skills, the degree prepares students for graduate studies and professional success in a number of fields. The Art History degree also expands cultural and historical perspectives, preparing students to contribute to our always-diversifying world.

Studying Art History at the University of Maine brings us closer to our past and shows us how it relates to our present. It also helps us visualize future worlds to come. Art history expands our perspectives, curiosity, and empathy.

- Justin Wolff, PhD, professor of art history
