

Websites Covering Economics & Finance

There are too many good websites covering economics to list them all; here are some of the best sites.

<http://www.cepr.net/>. Articles and data from the Center for Economic and Policy Research a pro-worker point of view.

<http://www.mecep.org> Maine Center for Economic Policy- Maine specific data

<http://www.dollarsandsense.org/index.html>. An economic newsletter and textbooks explaining economics from the perspective of everyday people.

<http://www.epi.org/>. Articles on economics, finance and government policy from a pro-worker standpoint.

www.bls.gov. Data on the U.S. economy, labor unions and employment from the United States Department of Labor, Bureau of Labor Statistics. Unemployment rates, consumer price indexes, and union density information are available at this site.

<http://www.census.gov/hhes/www/wealth/publications.html>. Detailed information on wealth in the U.S. gathered by the Census Bureau.

<https://www.conference-board.org/>. Information on the current state of the economy written for businesses.

<http://www.federalreserve.gov/econresdata/default.htm>. Technical economic data from the Federal Reserve and its regional banks. The Federal Reserve Board's Survey of Consumer Finances is one of the most accurate assessments inequality in the U.S.

<http://michael-hudson.com/tag/the-insiders-economic-dictionary/page/2/>. Articles on U.S. and international economics from the perspective of a left of center academic economist.

<http://www.nber.org/>. Articles and research on the U.S. economy from a neutral academic point of view.

<https://data.oecd.org/>. Information on economics produced for the Organization of Economic Cooperation and Development an organization representing the world's wealthiest nations.

<http://strategiccorporateresearch.org/>. Advice on researching corporations.

<http://topincomes.g-mond.parisschoolofeconomics.eu/#Home>:. Information and data maps showing inequality across the globe.

<http://www.itepnet.org/>. Institute on Taxation and Economic Policy