From the President

In this extraordinary time, we reflect on the profound experience we have shared at the University of Maine and in our personal lives during this global pandemic. Every graduate was affected by the pandemic and by so much else going on in the world around us, including renewed calls for action on racial justice and an increasing focus on global climate change. We are forever changed and informed going forward.

You have learned to be flexible. To manage. Dig in. Hang on. Persevere. Be determined. Contribute to a greater good. And take care of one another. Along the way, you've succeeded in so many ways, great and small, and you may have surprised yourself. Your transformation includes newfound levels of tenacity, resilience, patience, mindfulness and capacity to care.

You have already changed the world. You are ready to take on whatever the future brings. You are ready to shape tomorrow. Go forward and make a difference. The University of Maine will always be a part of you — who you are and who you will become.

Congratulations on all you have accomplished.

Distinguished Maine Professor 2021

Hemant Pendse is an internationally recognized leader in forest bioproducts research. Since joining the university in 1979, the professor of chemical engineering and chair of the Department of Chemical and Biomedical Engineering has spearheaded innovative research that has earned two patents, produced 82 publications, given more than 200 technical papers and garnered $17 million in external funding. He also has yielded new economic opportunities for Maine through his work on forest bioproducts. Students know Pendse as an educator who challenges them to think critically, provides clear and concise lessons, is always willing to help, and dedicates himself to their success.

Pendse founded the Forest Bioproducts Research Institute in 2010, and serves as its director. FBRI aims to identify the logistic, scientific, economic and policy factors that would allow forest-based products to be made at a commercial scale and inspire the creation of a biorefinery in Maine.

Under Pendse's leadership, FBRI built the nation's first pilot-scale plant for manufacturing nano-fibrillated cellulose, or nanocellulose. The institute earned $48 million for various projects, $17 million of which is attributable to Pendse's efforts.

FBRI developed and secured patents for its breakthrough thermal deoxygenation process (TDO) for making biofuels for jets and marine engines, and for its process to create advanced materials like nanocellulose. Pendse was instrumental in scale up to continuous pilot operations that benefit researchers and private business alike.

Pendse's research interests involve pulp and paper manufacturing, colloid systems, particulate and multiphase processes and sensor development. During his studies, he has developed forest biorefinery pilot-scale industrial process systems, an ultrasonic slurry characterization system, a laboratory instrument for particle surface charge characterization in concentrated colloids and an online particle size distribution sensor system for concentrated slurries. He also has developed multiple theories and methodologies to assist in particulate systems characterization and processing.

His numerous awards include the 2012 Genco Award from the University of Maine Pulp and Paper Foundation, and the 2012 UMaine Presidential Research and Creative Achievement.

Pendse's record of public service includes advising the Municipal Review Committee, a group of 115 Maine cities and towns united to tackle solid municipal waste problems; and serving on the Economic Development Assessment Team, Maine Innovation Economy Advisory Board, and the Governor's Wood-to-Energy Task Force. He and FBRI have also aided with the Forest Opportunity Roadmap/Maine (FOR/Maine).

Presidential Outstanding Teaching Award 2021

Judith Josiah-Martin, a lecturer in the School of Social Work, has taught in the School of Social Work for more than a decade, first as an adjunct instructor for four years, and as a full-time faculty member beginning in 2013. Multiple letters of support cite Josiah-Martin's passion for her subject matter and her "active, social, contextual, engaging and student-owned approach to learning." Her teaching philosophy with adult learners is described as thoughtful and inspiring, creating a climate in the classroom that invites engagement and "stimulates a desire to perform at the highest level." She cites the unwavering support of her colleagues and students' willingness to learn as significant contributions to her joy of teaching at UMaine.

In her teaching philosophy statement, Josiah-Martin noted five guiding principles that get to transformative learning: education must evoke curiosity and awaken or help the student to develop an inquisitive and adventurous outlook toward learning; student learning is handled in a respectful, courteous manner, recognizing not only the educator's knowledge, but also the students' inherent knowledge and experiences; a teacher must come prepared to deliver accurate, relevant, usable knowledge that fosters development of life-sustaining skills from a manageable, expert, competent and well-prepared base; students must be able to make use of the information in such a way that it adds value and meaning to their lives; and students should be encouraged to expand their "thinking capacity" — question, discuss, challenge, present — to become problem solvers, strategic planners and experts in their own rights.

Josiah-Martin's 38 years of social work practice also make her a sought-after speaker locally, regionally, nationally and internationally on topics related to substance abuse, domestic violence and trauma, and diversity, equity and inclusion.

Presidential Research and Creative Achievement Award 2021

Elizabeth Allan, professor of higher education, has been a faculty member in the College of Education and Human Development since 2000. In her research philosophy statement, Allan notes that her work is rooted in the belief that "higher education can be a driver of social change toward a more equitable, inclusive, sustainable and socially just world." She was the principal investigator for a 2008 national study of student hazing, and since then has authored and co-authored numerous articles, chapters, and reports about hazing and its prevention.

She directs stophazing.org, which focuses on promoting "positive school and campus climates through research, information sharing, and development and dissemination of evidence-based hazing prevention strategies," and has become a nationally cited source of states' anti-hazing laws, related news articles and strategies for preventing hazing. She also leads the Hazing Prevention Consortium, a research-to-practice initiative designed to contribute to an evidence base for hazing prevention. Allan is a sought-after subject matter expert for groups ranging from the media to the U.S. Senate HELP Committee.

In addition to hazing, Allan's research on campus cultures and climates includes studies on student engagement, diversity and equity. Her books include "Women's status in higher education: Equity matters" and "Policy discourses, gender, and education: Constructing women's status." Allan's numerous awards include the Graduate School's 2019 Faculty Mentor Impact Award, and the College of Education and Human Development's 2018 Faculty Research Award.

Presidential Public Engagement Award 2021

James Dill, a UMaine alumnus, has been a University of Maine Cooperative Extension pest management specialist since 1981. He also is an Extension professor, coordinating the UMaine Extension Diagnostic and Research Laboratory, and the Integrated Pest Management (IPM) and Pesticide Safety Education Programs. The entomologist has served as an associate program administrator, and legislative and congressional resource liaison.

In his more than 40-year career, Dill has been instrumental in growing and developing Maine's pest management and pesticide safety education initiatives. Under his leadership as Maine's first IPM coordinator, multiple agricultural sectors have increased crop yield and quality, reduced pest damage and minimized pesticide use through the implementation of IPM strategies. The economic impacts associated with these IPM programs over four decades is estimated at more than $200 million.

Dill's state and regional public education and community engagement efforts have included outreach on insects, ticks and other arthropod pests, authoring manuals in IPM and pesticide safety, and publication in peer-reviewed literature. He is widely recognized in the Northeast for his ability to efficiently and effectively communicate with a wide variety of constituents, sharing evidence-based information and strategies to best address issues faced by homeowners, gardeners, commercial growers and policymakers.

Dill has served in the Maine Legislature since 2012, and is the senate chair of the committees on Agriculture, Conservation, Forestry, and Inland Fisheries and Wildlife. His community service also includes leadership roles on local school boards and Orono-Old Town Kiwanis International. In 2017, he was honored with the New England Higher Education Excellence Award from the New England Board of Higher Education and the New England Higher Education Compact.
