

“My Son’s Behavior Has Covered Me With Shame”: Gunpowder’s Impact on Generational Notions of Masculinity in the Creek Confederacy

Jennifer McCutchen (University of Southern Maine)

Jennifer Monroe McCutchen, Ph.D., is an Assistant Professor of History at the University of Southern Maine. She specializes in early American history and ethnohistory, with a focus on the themes of gender, power, exchange, and diplomacy. Her research uses gunpowder as a lens to explore shifting power dynamics among Native men within the eighteenth-century Creek Confederacy. Jennifer’s work has been supported by the David Library of the American Revolution and the William L. Clements Library at the University of Michigan.
