

School of Economics Graduate Program Learning Outcomes (PLOs)

Upon completion of our program, a successful student will be able to:

1. Formulate, critique, and clearly communicate to diverse audiences accurate economic and policy analyses (including quantitative, statistical, and qualitative) that help address real-world problems.
2. Apply, interpret, evaluate, and construct economic ideas and arguments grounded in appropriate theoretical foundations and quantitative data.
3. Develop and achieve a program of study that prepares the student for their own career goals.
4. Work collaboratively with peers, faculty, other researchers, and non-academic partners to advance economic knowledge and public understanding of economic concepts and applications.
5. Incorporate diverse perspectives, knowledge-systems, priorities, and equity in economic analyses and communication.